S&P Dow Jones Indices Broadens Family of Global Infrastructure Indices Into Bonds

New Indices Expand S&P DJI's Fixed Income and Infrastructure Offerings Worldwide

New York, July 29, 2015: S&P Dow Jones Indices (S&P DJI), one of the world's leading index providers, today announced the launch of a robust suite of global infrastructure bond indices to effectively measure corporate, municipal and preferred debt issued by infrastructure companies throughout the world.

The new lineup of indices track the fixed income component of S&P DJI's widely followed family of listed infrastructure equity benchmarks, which include the Dow Jones Brookfield Global Infrastructure Index, providing investors with a holistic perspective of the infrastructure asset class.

"Today's launch of a suite of global infrastructure bond indices allows S&P Dow Jones Indices to provide investors with a complement to our well known suite of infrastructure equity indices, and places us one step closer to our stated goal as being the only major index provider to offer an extensive lineup of fixed income indices across all bond types throughout the world," says Alex Matturri, CEO of S&P Dow Jones Indices. ""The demand for transparent benchmarks that measure infrastructure assets is growing worldwide, and S&P Dow Jones Indices is proud to offer infrastructure investors with another set of benchmarks to effectively measure the performance of these assets."

Amongst a number of global index releases, it has created and launched the S&P Aggregate™ Bond Index Family which covers over 20,000 individual securities with the ultimate goal of launching thousands of maturity and sector based indices, as well as the S&P 500® Bond Index which is the market's first ever index that tracks the debt of the S&P 500 companies.
